REAL PROHIBITION IN MAINE.
Liquor Men Who Have Defied Law
Heed Court's Warnings

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.

Bangor, Me., June 30.—"Wait until the first of July and you'll hear something dropped around here," is what people are saying of the liquor situation in Bangor. It is predicted and mentioned there will be nothing but an artificial drought, and that, which Nature's recent dry spell will seem like a flood.

With the end of June the United States special liquor tax stamps held by the dealers here will expire. Considering the warnings of the Supreme Court and the Federal jury the liquor men have decided not to take out any more stamps for the present. Justice Soper, in passing sentences of double fines at that time, remarked that the next time any of the respondents was convicted of liquor selling a fine sentence would be imposed.

A dozen or more liquor dealers have already been ordered to close their premises. The principal restaurant here is said to be looking for a purchaser for his place. In Exchange street, which was a few months ago a much-patronized barroom is now occupied as a fish market; one of the hotels here, the Grand hotel, which has been closed, and several ordinary bars have ceased to dispense refreshments. In August the Government will levy the tax and continue to sell liquor the revenue men will be after them, while in any event they must take the Government on search and seizure and a term in jail.

"We are getting to be in such a hurry in America that the ordinary civilities are disappearing out of our education and our life," he said.

"When you have dismissed good manners out of society you have dismissed that beneficent and kind and generous influence which good manners ought to always be the expression.

"We are face to face with a great social problem concerning which the minds of most of us are moving upon distinctly wrong lines. No one who is conscious of the social and industrial situation can be unconscious of the fact that the classes have drifted away from the masses.

"And the suffering is large in proportion of them you find disposed to be be-
